

Honestly, I haven't heard of that many of these companies. The ones that I know/recognize the names are:

Bombay dyeing

HDFC bank

ICIC bank

Jai Corp Ltd (I think)

Jet airways

Nestle India

Reliance

State bank of India

Tata

Unitech

Sorry this took so long/I don't know how helpful my info is.

Reliance and Tata seem to own everything in India. Especially Reliance- there name is everywhere (Reliance Fresh is a bookstore; Reliance is a phone company; Reliance Trends is a clothing store; Reliance Times is a book store, etc. etc.) I can't really think of what Tata owns, but I know I see their name all the time.

HDFC was that ATM that I used when I was there this time. I don't know what anyone's feelings towards that bank in general are, but it is my impression that banks are becoming more and more important in India. More people go to the cities from villages everyday, and I believe that as the middle class continues to grow, more people will intrust their money in a bank as opposed to just living on the cash that they keep hidden in their houses. I haven't really heard that from anyone, but it seems pretty logical to me. Same goes for airlines (like Jet airways), I'd think...more people can afford to travel by air now, I would assume. I know that Kingfisher wasn't on your list (and I'm sure that you know this), but the airline apparently loses millions of dollars a day.

Hope this helped a bit and let me know if there's any other info you want!
